Chivalrous Foes Meet Again in Hall of Fame

Procession walking to the Hall of Fame at New York University, led by Gloria trumpeters and followed by Ambassador Jusserand of France, with President Elmer Ellsworth Brown of the university, Robert Underwood Johnson, Director of the Hall of Fame, and many other distinguished personages. The ceremony took place on May 22 and marked the unveiling of the busts of seven distinguished Americans, of whom the most notable were Lincoln, Grant and Lee. One woman, Frances Elizabeth Willard, was included in the group.

An element of the dramatic attached to the unveiling on the same day in the Hall of Fame at New York University of the busts of Grant and Lee—the two great commanders who faced each other on the battlefield during the Civil War and who met at Appomattox, the one to yield and the other to receive the surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia. Altogether the busts of seven great Americans were unveiled on May 22: Ralph Waldo Emerson, Henry Ward Beecher, Frances Elizabeth Willard, Ulysses Simpson Grant, Robert Edward Lee, Alexander Hamilton and Abraham Lincoln. Six of the busts were uncovered by kin of the persons honored.

The procession of those who were to participate in the unveiling ceremonies filed out of the Gould Memorial Library at 4 o'clock, headed by Robert Underwood Johnson, Director of the Hall of Fame, and Dr. Elmer Ellsworth Brown, Chancellor of New York University, in academic gowns and caps. Preceded by the Grand Marshal, Dr. Albert S. Borgman, and the Gloria trumpeters, playing the university hymn, the procession filed around the campus to the south end of the colonnade, in which stood the flag-draped bust of Emerson.

The ceremonies began here with a brief address of Dr. Johnson, who presented the busts to Chancellor Brown.

Laurel wreaths and bouquets hung about the flag-draped busts of Grant and Lee, to which the procession filed. The bust of General Grant, an original by James Earle Fraser and Thomas Hudson Jones, the gift of citizens, replaces the small tentative sketch by the late Henry M. Shrady, which was unveiled by Marshal Joffre on the anniversary of the birth of Grant, April 22, 1922, and which the death of the sculptor prevented him from enlarging and completing. The bust was unveiled by Major Gen. J. G. Harbord.

"Arbitration to settle differences between Governments and the idea of a World Court were both initiated by President Grant," General Harbord pointed out. "With many shining qualities, the one for which his country loves him best and the one for which he stood pre-eminent among great soldiers was his magnanimity."

Prolonged applause greeted the unveiling of the bust of General Lee, which had been hung about with wreaths and over which waved a flag of Virginia. The bust is an original by George T. Brewster, the gift of the New York Division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, and was presented by Mrs. R. W. Jones, former President of the division. The tall and erect grandson of the Confederate General, Dr. George Bolling Lee, who unveiled the bust, stood at attention while the trumpeters played "Dixie."

ON May 7 Rome gave to the first British King to visit that city in a decade and the first British Queen to enter Rome from time immemorial an unforgettable reception, pouring out all its pent-up enthusiasm in scenes of rejoicing which it would be difficult to equal.

This visit to the Italian capital, coming only six months after the Fascista revolution which completely changed the nation's policy, is considered in political circles as more than a polite call of one reigning house upon another. It is held to be important that King George, soon after arriving at the Quirinal Palace, had a long private conversation with Mussolini.

A great crowd was outside the railroad station to greet the royal couple. Over the long route which the royal cortège followed there was tremendous cheering. As the brilliant cortège in open carriages, drawn by the thoroughbred horses of King Victor Emmanuel, moved down the principal Roman thoroughfares, escorted by mounted cuirass-siers of the King's bodyguard in shining breastplates and with waving horsehair plumes, the enthusiasm knew no bounds. Round after round of applause echoed deafeningly, while from the windows decorated with flags and bunting showers of flowers fell into the carriage. At night the city was illuminated and presented a carnival appearance.

FEAT OF GLIDER

Georges Barbot, the French aviator, on May 6 set up a new record in aeronautics by crossing and recrossing the English Channel on a tiny motor-assisted glider. He crossed from St. Inglevert on the French coast and descended at Lympne. He then flew back to his original starting point, where he landed safely just before 9 o'clock in the evening. This is the first time the Channel has been crossed by a machine depending in part on air currents. His outward journey from point to point was exactly twenty miles as the crow flies, but having been taken somewhat out of the direct course Barbot's actual distance covered was about seventy miles. It was stated that his success would win him the prize of 25,000 francs offered by the Paris Matin for the first French aviator to fly the Channel and back again on a machine of not more than fifteen horsepower.

He was sentenced by the French court to fifteen years' imprisonment and to pay a fine of 100,000,000 marks, which at the present rate of exchange is about $2,750. His sentence was appealed to a French court, which later confirmed the sentence. (P. & A. Photos.)

Unveiling of Statue of Alexander Hamilton

SALUTING AT MONUMENT UNVEILING

PRESIDENT HARDING, speaking on May 17 at the unveiling of the statue of Alexander Hamilton, deplored the increase of factionism in the United States, which, he said, was growing as never before, all the time seeking to "promote this or that interest without regard to the relationship to others and without regard to the common weal." He described the menace as one of "hatred and prejudice and violence," saying that coalitions would "invade the constitutional rights of others or subvert the Constitution itself," and urging that "the false cry of class be throttled."

A paragraph in his speech wherein he spoke of the crowds that were "challenging civil and religious liberty" was taken by many as a reference to the Ku Klux Klan.

The study of Hamilton's life and achievements has been long a hobby of the President, and Hamilton was the subject of a lecture which he delivered in various parts of the country before he came to the White House. What the world needed today more than anything else, the President said, was the leadership of a statesman of the calibre of Hamilton, and when such a leadership developed he predicted "the substitution of hope and resolution where hatred and resentment are now hindering recovery." He eulogized Hamilton's conception of financial integrity, and the faith of obligations as a remedy for present world ills.

MUST HAVE HIS PINT

The horse here shown in London, England, it is to be feared would come under the ban of the Volstead law if he were in this country, for he is an ardent advocate of more or less strong drink. Once a day he steps into his favorite tippling place and drinks a pint of England's best brewed ale. He laps this up with great gusto, and although his eyes plead for more he is never allowed to exceed the limit.

HISTORIC interest attaches to the appearance in Los Angeles Harbor of the Roosevelt, the ship in which Peary journeyed when he discovered the North Pole. A volume could be written of the hopes and fears, the thrills and pangs of which the ship has been the mute witness. On Peary's early trip in the Summer of 1905 he planned to go by way of Greenland or Grant Land to the North Pole in the Roosevelt, which was specially constructed with a ramming apparatus to break the ice. In Greenland he added many Eskimos to his white force and after great privations and sufferings reached a point 200 miles from the pole, but at that point had to stop. Not discouraged, however, he started again, and in 1909 finally reached the pole, the goal that had been the dream of arctic explorers for more than a century. Following his return, the Roosevelt has been on duty for the Government in Alaskan waters. She has recently been sold to a commercial concern and will hereafter ply about the United States on mercantile business. She is 182 feet long and has a net tonnage of 340. She is so strongly made that it is difficult to conceive of any storm or gale that can give her any trouble.

value to billions of dollars. Manufacturing had been speeded up to the very peak of production, and goods by the cargo and carload were pouring into Government depots from every direction. Much had already gone abroad, and this was sold on the other side at a great discount, chiefly to the French Government. On this side, however, there still remained an enormous bulk of supplies, and it devolved on the Government to take its loss and dispose of them at the earliest moment possible. The group of three officials shown on this page have had the difficult task of creating interest among buyers in the surplus of the War Department. Largely through advertising, over one billion dollars has been reclaimed by the Treasury, and the bulk of the surplus has been liquidated. The returns to the Government represents about 40 per cent. of the original cost. This fast-selling program was carried out without material injury to the business of the country. Included in the surplus disposed was nearly every article known to commerce as well as real estate and buildings.

A DAMAGE amounting to $2,000,000 was done by the flood and fire which swept Hot Springs, Ark., on the night of May 14 after a veritable cloudburst in the Ozark Mountains. The sole victim reported was Mrs. K. Christianson, whose skull was crushed when she was caught in an automobile by the onrush of the waters. When the storm broke millions of gallons of water were let loose on the mountain. Water rushed down the slopes from both sides. People were taken off their feet and carried for blocks. Men saved themselves by catching at telephone poles and window ledges. Rescue squads saved victims from the street tides as they hurtled past. Every structure on the block was razed, including a score of buildings and the Marquette Hotel.

PRIDE OF THE SEAS

The steamship Leviathan sailed from Newport News at 8:25 o'clock A. M., May 16, for Boston, where she will be drydocked for the finishing touches of her reconditioning for transatlantic service.

As the great liner, displacing the largest tonnage of any vessel that ever entered Hampton Roads, slipped slowly down the channel thousands of persons on shore and aboard small craft joined in cheering her. Airplanes circled overhead and factory whistles joined in the din.

The Leviathan left the docks of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Company, where workmen had spent many months on her.

A full crew was aboard, together with a force of shipyard workmen who will aid the employees at the Boston yard in putting on the finishing touches. From Boston the Leviathan is expected to make a trial run to Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, some time in June with 800 invited guests. It is scheduled to leave New York on July 4 on her first transatlantic trip as an American passenger liner.

RED CROSS PANEL

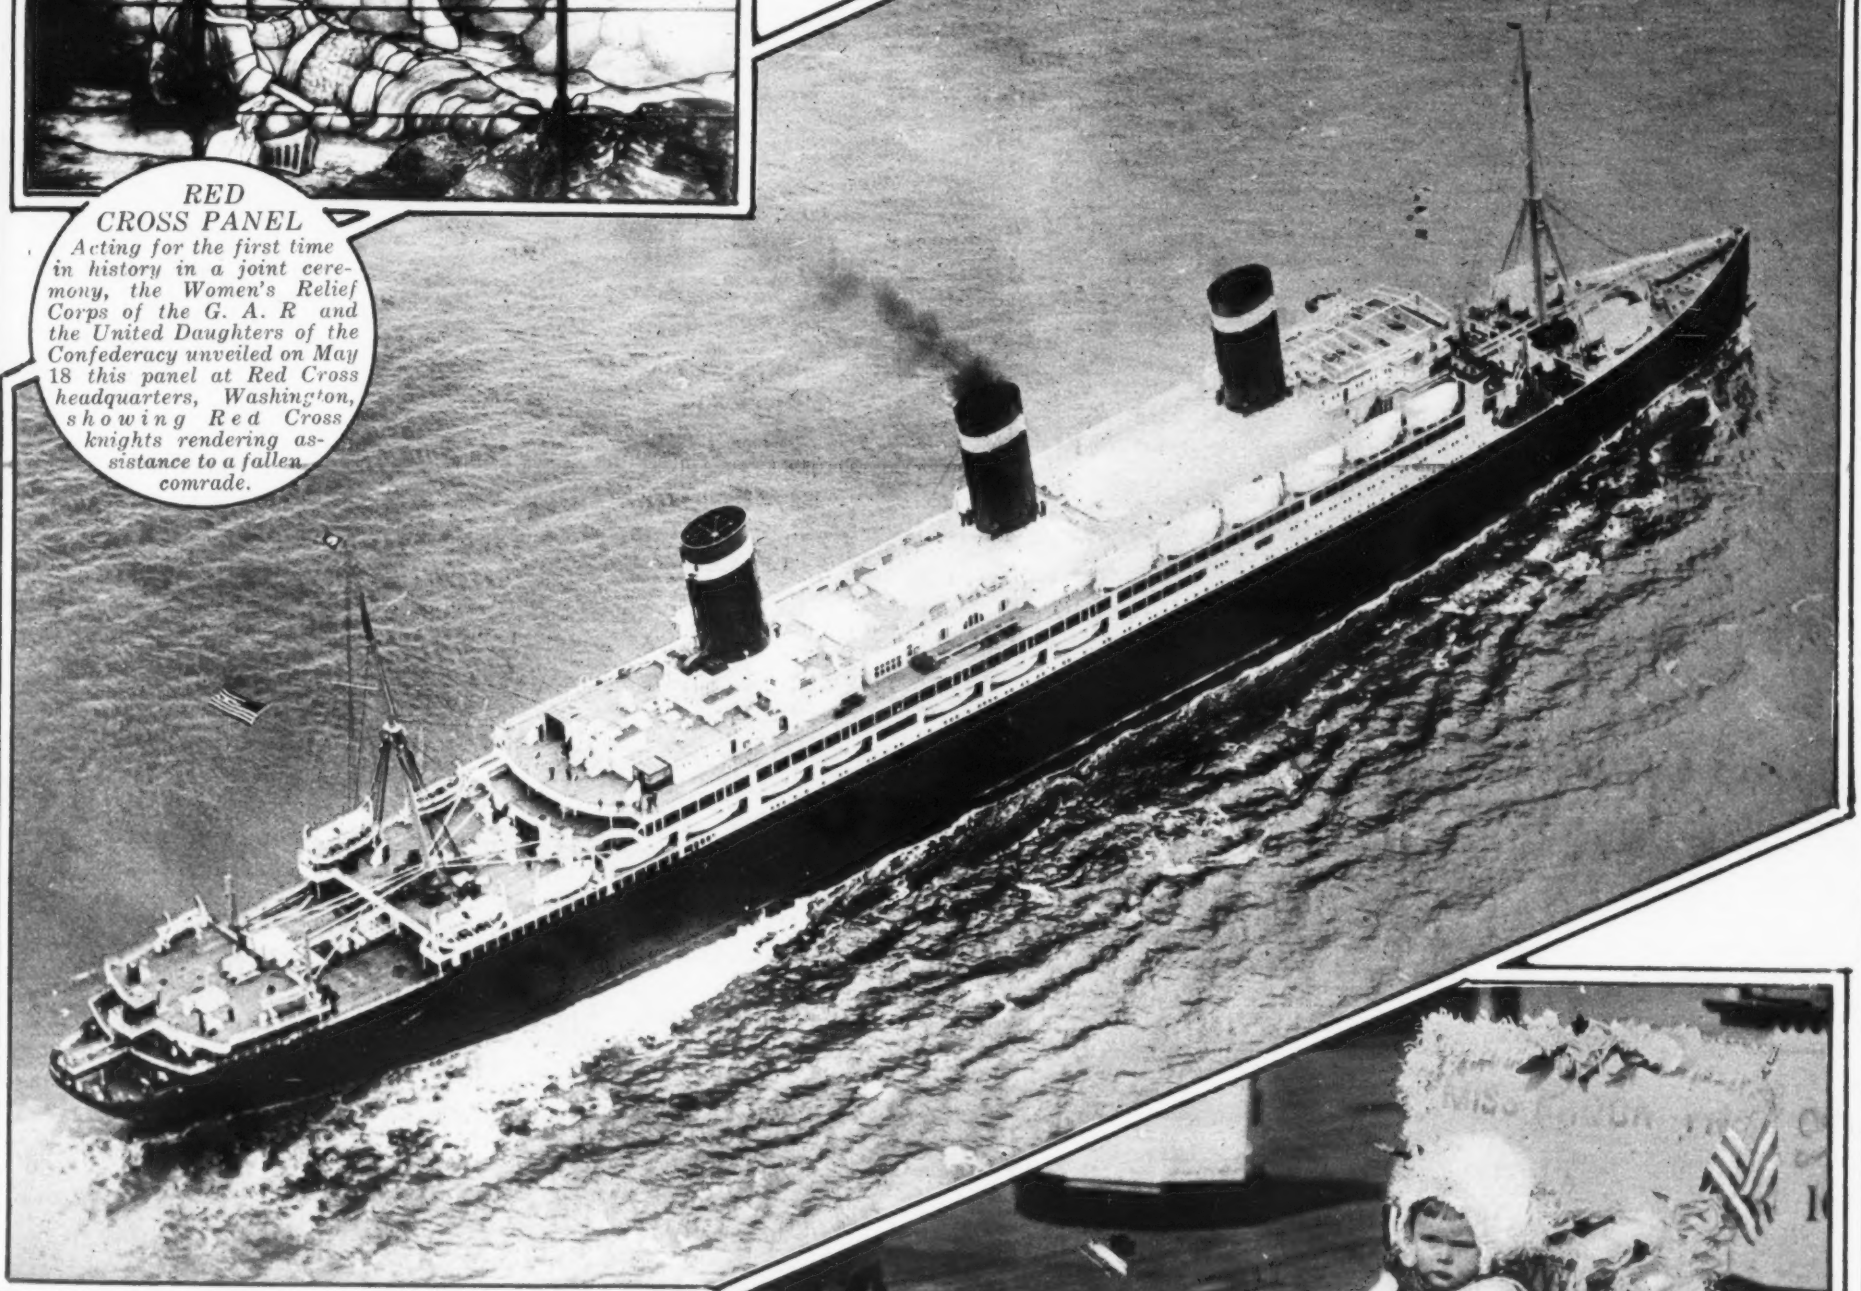

Acting for the first time in history in a joint ceremony, the Women's Relief Corps of the G. A. R. and the United Daughters of the Confederacy unveiled on May 18 this panel at Red Cross headquarters, Washington, showing Red Cross knights rendering assistance to a fallen comrade.

COMPOSITE PHOTO OF SEVEN "MOVIE" STARS

Molded into this one face are the features of seven of the screen's most beautiful women. The hair is Gloria Swanson's; Betty Compson contributes the eyes; Agnes Ayres accounts for the nose; Bebe Daniels owns the mouth; Pola Negri answers for the chin; Nita Naldi registers with neck and hands, while Dorothy Dalton possesses the dimples.

LEVIATHAN TAKES THE SEAS

With Old Glory flying in the breeze and signals of the international code flying from her mainmast, the reconditioned Leviathan is here shown leaving Newport News, Va., for Boston, where she is to receive the finishing touches before entering the merchant marine service on the 4th of July. This photo was made from the air by the Army Air Service. The great steamer so prominent during the war as United States transport will be one of the most palatial that rides the seas. A small army of workmen have been busy for many months past in placing her in perfect condition for transcontinental passenger service at a cost of over $8,000,000. She is excelled in size only by the Majestic of the White Star Line.

She carried off second prize.

HARNESSING NIAGARA

Great power project now under construction at Niagara Falls at an approximate cost of $11,000,000. The enterprise includes tunnel intake works, outlet and forebay, three slope tunnel penstocks, gatehouse with head gates and control works, and a new powerhouse with three 70,000-horsepower water wheels and attached electric generators. Water from the tunnel is taken from the upper river level about one mile above the falls. The intake portal of the tunnel is of horseshoe form, sixty feet high and sixty feet wide. The outlet portal is here seen as it appeared one year after breaking ground.

FLASK OF TREMENDOUS POWER

(Below.) An invention which will lift 30,000 pounds in three seconds derives its power from the small steel bottle here shown containing a highly expansible liquid. The power can be released as desired without injury to the opening valve, which is redipped at each recharging of the container with a soft non-expansible metal at the cost of one-fifth of a cent.

Foundation work being prosecuted on the American Frontier Mart, Lake Shore Drive, Chicago, which will be the future home of 400 leading furniture manufacturers in the United States and will continue uninterrupted despite suspension of building activities elsewhere. Eight thousand eighty-foot piles are being driven as hard-pan supports for the mammoth reinforced concrete building that will rise sixteen floors above Lake Michigan. The floor space will total 1,500,000 square feet.

CORRECTION

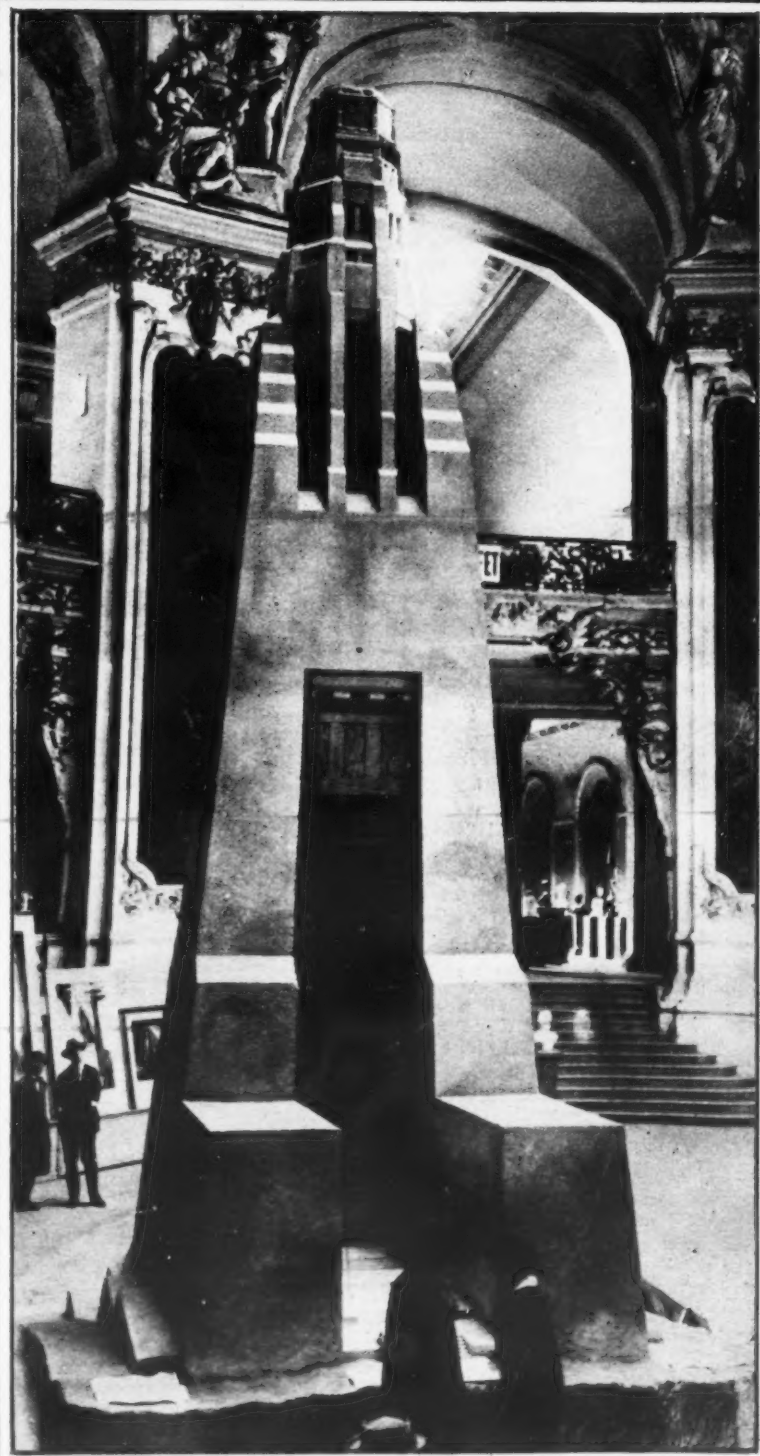

In our issue of May 24 it was stated that Governor Preus of Minnesota had been appointed United States Senator from that State by Lieutenant Governor Collins, who had succeeded him as Governor. This was an error. The action was contemplated, but has been held in abeyance by a question as to its constitutionality.

PICTURESQUE RELIGIOUS CELEBRATION AT BRUGES

Thousands of Catholics from all parts of Belgium recently attended the pilgrimage to the Saint Song. A precious relic, consisting of a piece of cloth believed to be stained with the blood of Christ and brought from the Holy Land in 1150 by the Count of Flanders, is carried through the street in solemn procession. Afterward the relic is returned to the temporary altar here shown outside the Hotel de Ville. (Kadel & Herbert.)

TO HONOR AMERICANS

This memorial exhibited at the Paris salon is to be erected at Pointe de Grave, where the first American soldiers landed in France in 1917, coming to the aid of the hard-pressed Allies in the World War. It will shortly be dedicated with impressive ceremonies. (International.)

OVATION TO HINDENBURG

The former war idol of the German Army, Marshal von Hindenburg, is here shown with the German Minister Gessler at one of the largest military reviews since the war held in the vicinity of Berlin. The Marshal received a tremendous ovation and delivered a speech, the principal feature of which was unstinted laudation of ex-Kaiser Wilhelm, now in exile at Doorn, Holland. (Kadel & Herbert.)

FOURTEEN MEN BURNED TO DEATH IN TEXAS OIL WELL FIRE

While crews of men were trying to cap the Hughes gusher near Kerens, Texas, recently a spark created by the clashing of two bits of metal set the gas and oil on fire, with the result that fourteen men lost their lives. The well burned for days, the intense heat making approach impossible until men equipped with asbestos suits entered the heated zone and recovered the charred bodies of the victims. This picture was made by a daring photographer at the risk of life.

A NEW AND VIVID STORY OF THE GREAT WAR BY RUDYARD KIPLING

Now Appearing in the Sunday Magazine Section of The New York Times

*Ten Brilliant
Pictures of the Stirring
Moments on the Battle Front*

*The Adventures
Mulvaneys of the Irish Guards
Who Saw It Through*

Mr. Kipling has embodied in a history of the Irish Guards all the labors and sorrows and humors of battle, the ebbs and flows of the greatest of all wars, as only the author of "Soldiers Three" could do it—breathless days in the trenches, tense moments before the zero hour, charges through rains of fire—altogether probably the most striking story of the World War yet written.

There are ten instalments, one each Sunday for ten weeks.

KENTUCKY DERBY

Finish of the Kentucky Derby at Louisville, with Zev, the great three-year-old, passing the post a winner, with Martingale second and Vigil, who had been strongly backed to win, third. The race was worth $53,625 to H. F. Sinclair, the owner of the colt.

ZEV, H. F. Sinclair's brown colt, carried off the Kentucky Derby May 14, beating J. S. Cosden's Martingale by a length and a half in a wonderful race. Zev, the colt that came back, led from the rising of the barrier until the fall of the flag, and emphatically demonstrated his superiority over the greatest colts in the United States.

Walter J. Salmon's Vigil, winner of the Preakness Stakes at Pimlico, showed that he is still a great colt by finishing third. The race was run truly over a fast track, the time being 2:05 2-5, two and one-fifth second slower than the record for the track. Nassau, owned by Frederick Johnson, was fourth, and the East therefore swept all the honors of the 1923 classic of Churchill Downs.

Twenty-one went to the post at 4:47 o'clock, and Zev, breaking from the tenth position from the inner rail, went to the front with all the speed for which he is famous, and while the race was by no means settled until the field swept down the homestretch, it was certain that the brown colt would win if he could hold the pace.

WINNING HORSE

Zev, winner of the Kentucky Derby, photographed immediately after he had won the race in such style as to demonstrate that he is the greatest in his age and class this year. Earl Sande, said to be the best rider on the American turf today, is in the saddle holding the wreath bestowed upon the winner.

"THE COVERED WAGON"

The Great American Picture at Last

"Never before has such a vital and compelling argument for Americanization been shown.

"If you are a native-born American, this picture will give you a thrill of pride in your ancestry and your race.

"If you are an American by adoption, your pride will be in the fact that you are the foster child of a nation whose representatives did and can do such things as are shown in 'The Covered Wagon.'

"If you are an alien, you will see the soul of America and you will realize why this nation has attained the place it occupies today.

"The picture shows the American spirit at its height—dauntless and unconquerable. It is a document of historic and artistic importance far in advance of anything that has ever been filmed. It is unique and unforgettable."
